Description

Superb small chest of drawers / writing desk / secretaire in mahogany from the 18th century called Kneehole desk from the George III period

Indeed, these small pieces of furniture are called Knee Hole desk since they have a small door in the center which reveals a storage space.

Very nice medallion on the door typical of Georgian piece. The door has its key which works.

the top is decorated with a lemon inlay and also has three zippers. Two glass rests and a writing table

Very nice proportions and small model
Original handles and superb flame in the drawers
