

Raimondo Montecucoli As A Military Commander In Armor With A Marshal's Staff. Of XVII Centu

2 500 EUR

Signature : Peter Nason , entourage

Period : 17th century

Condition : Réentoilé

Material : Oil painting

Width : 59cm

Height : 74cm

Description

Portrait of a military commander in armour with a marshal's stick.

Dutch school.

Circle by Peter Nason (Amsterdam, 1612 - 1690 The Hague).

Raimondo Montecucoli was a famous seventeenth-century general and military strategist in the service of the Habsburg Empire.

Born in 1609 in Italy, Montecucoli fought in numerous European wars, distinguishing himself for his tactical and strategic skill.

He is best known for his victories during the

Dealer

Antichità di Alina

Peintures anciennes - Art nouveau - Art déco, micromosaïques, porcelaine

Mobile : +39 3383199131

Via Maggio 63 / rosso

Firenze 50100

Thirty Years' War and the war against the Turks. Montecuccoli is also remembered for his writings on military theory, which influenced subsequent generations of commanders. He died in 1680.

Montecuccoli came from a noble Italian family, but chose to pursue a military career in the service of the Habsburg Empire. He studied in Vienna and fought in numerous battles and military campaigns, earning the trust of Emperor Leopold I.

Montecuccoli was known for his discipline, his ability to adapt to situations on the battlefield, and his ability to lead troops with cunning and determination.

Montecuccoli fought in many significant battles during the Thirty Years' War and the wars against the Turks.

Some of his most famous battles include the Battle of Lens in 1648, where he achieved a decisive victory against French forces, and the Battle of Vezekény in 1664, where he defeated the Ottoman army. He faced opponents such as the famous French general Turenne and the great Turkish commander Kara Mustafa Pasha. His tactical skill and determination made him a feared opponent on the battlefield.