Description

LAPRADE (Pierre COFFINHAL-LAPRADE, known as), painter and engraver born in Narbonne (Aude) on July 25, 1875, died in Fontenay-aux-Roses on December 23, 1931 (Ec. Fr.). After beginning artistic studies in Bourdelle's studio in Montauban, Pierre Laprade moved to Paris in 1892 to follow courses at the École des Beaux-Arts. He attended classes very rarely, preferring to copy the masters exhibited at the Louvre. It was in 1901 that he exhibited for the first time at the Salon des Indépendants when Impressionism was bowing out. It was Ambroise Vollard who made him known to the general public by purchasing his entire workshop. Exhibitions in France and abroad, particularly in Italy, were numerous and his success was resounding, notably in 1926 during his visit to the
