began exhibiting at the Salon of 1848 where he presented six drawn landscapes. In 1859, he revealed himself as an etcher. At the Salon of 1863, he exhibited Six diverse views in etching: Fantasies, published by Alfred Cadart, accompanied by painted still lifes. He is undoubtedly a member of the young Society of Etchers. His works show views of French cities under the Ancien Régime. He also produced watercolors which perfectly imitated the art of the genre painters of the 18th century, and whose taste was fashionable. Still for Cadart, he offered a series of etchings to L'Illustration nouvelle in 1868. We also know of him portraits of personalities printed on lithographic stone.
