published by L'Imprimerie Chaix, Paris. The initial idea came from Jules Chéret, then artistic director of Chaix, a printing company located at 20 rue Bergère. Each issue includes four posters reproduced in bell format and in chromolithography. Each print includes an authentication dry stamp. The sales price per issue is 2.50 francs, the subscription 27 francs; There is a deluxe edition on Japan, printed in 100 copies, sold for 80 francs for 12 issues. In January 1897, a first volume containing all the posters published the previous year was offered for sale, preceded by an introduction signed Roger Marx, in an album format bound by Jean Engel based on the model by Paul Berthon¹. There were a total of five volumes, until January 1901, for a total of 256 posters for 97 artists. Each volume was accompanied by two drawings specially designed by an artist and reproduced using the chromolithographic process. (Source Wikipedia)
