Description

View of a Dutch port by the Dutch Austrian Vedute and the marine painter Elias Pieter van Bommel (1819 in Amsterdam - 1890 in Vienna). Van Bommel studied at the Rijksakademie van beeldende kunsten in Amsterdam and with the landscape painter George Andries Roth. Under the influence of Roth, he initially painted mainly landscapes. In the 1850s, however, he turned to detailed vedute and marine painting. Some of his works also have historical value, particularly due to the detailed and reliable depiction of historic buildings. He created some paintings with his brother-in-law, Dominicus Anthonius Peduzzi. Van Bommel painted in the Netherlands, notably in Amsterdam, where he lived, in Rotterdam, Dordrecht, Scheveningen, Vlissingen and Hoorn. He also made numerous study trips to Belgium,
