Description

Jean and Robert Cloutier (1930 2015) and (1930 2008).

Imposing sculpture representing a man's head with removable door on half of the screw revealing a large compartment.

It is made of shiny blue enameled ceramic (rare).

Provenance of the sculpture, close friends and childhood of the artists.

According to my information taken directly from the people concerned, this is the first model created by the artists to offer them, given the success, they subsequently created this model in different colors.

HISTORY: Jean and Robert Cloutier are called the twin brothers of ceramics. After being apprentices to Lafourcade, Rivière, Georges Jouve and Pol Chambost, the brothers created their own workshop in Paris in 1955.

They participated in numerous exhibitions and were exhibited in several art galleries.

They produced decorative objects that were both functional and dreamlike.

After Paris and a brief interlude in the town of Yonne, the Cloutiers settled in the Languedoc region in the south of France.

Continually refining their ceramic processes, they are considered masters of their craft and are held in high esteem by the profession and renowned ceramic artists.
