Description
-------------

A red roof and white walls in the center of the painting, the house catches our eye. At its foot, a stream strewn with stones and above, a granite cliff covering the sky, the house seems anchored in the nature.

This painting by the painter Augustin Ferrando exudes strength, because in addition to its composition, the painter uses pure colors, like the "Fauves" of other times. From his house in Miliana in Algeria, Augustin Ferrando made it a nest, a refuge.

Augustin Ferrando was born in April 1880 in Miliana in Algeria and died in April 1957 in Oran.

A student of the School of Fine Arts of Algiers in 1898, he joined the Druet and Rochegrosse
