most eminent Salons in Venice, it was nicknamed the "Venetian Staël". Denon asked Mme Vigée-Lebrun to paint the portrait of her friend, which she did... And for his part, Denon made an engraving representing Mme Vigée-Lebrun painting the portrait of Isabella Teotichi-Marin. See: Bibliothèque nationale, Dept des Estampes, Paris, Ef 47/fol.p.69.

Our drawing, in reverse, just takes up the left part of Denon's print where we see Isabella Teotochi-Marin carrying a bird to her mouth. In the print, a dog is depicted at his feet, seemingly attracted to the bird.
