Description

This pair of English solid mahogany chairs, dating from the mid-19th century, is known as "Hall chairs". The backs of the chairs are decorated with carved escutcheons and scrollwork, adding a distinctive touch to their appearance. The seats are made of solid wood, with a smooth, polished surface. The front legs of the chairs are straight, while the rear legs are slightly curved to ensure good stability. These chairs were often used in the entrance halls of British homes to welcome visitors.
