Description

In chrome-plated metal, this store counter display features several articulated arms and offered a multitude of possibilities for showcasing both a pair of gloves accompanied by a scarf and a bag, for example. Its base is weighted with lead to provide good stability and its design suggests that it is a "Stockman & Siegel" production dating from the end of the 19th century at the time when its articles were not yet signed under the feet as is always the case with later models with Art Deco bases. Some chrome-plating missing due to its use.
