Description

Beautiful and very rare object, a birth scapular, Catholic religion, with two embroidered plaques, for a well-born child, relics it contained guaranteed accession to the divine heavens until his baptism. (Infant mortality at the time was a scourge),

The two elements, connected by silk ribbons, were placed one in front, the other behind the shoulder blades (Scapula). hence its name.

Miniature embroidery: Scattered stitch flowers, gold embroidery of faded color; in one oval cartridge: instruments of Passion and heart of gold, on second, double monogram of Mary, heart of gold.

Note that Marie de Medici, Mother of Louis XIII and regent at probable period of this scapular, used 2 very similar intertwined Ms.
