Description

Superb bronze print with brown patina representing Napoleon Bonaparte on a battlefield, created by the artist Daumié (19th-20th century). Dating from the late 19th century, this sculpture captures the emperor in an iconic posture, standing with his right hand tucked into his vest, symbolizing all his determination and authority. The careful details of the uniform, the cocked hat, and the facial expression are of great finesse, reinforced by a brown patina which adds depth and richness to the whole. This piece, measuring 39 cm in height by 13 cm in width, is in excellent general condition. Note, however, the presence of a slight trace of verdigris on the back, which in no way alters the beauty and integrity of the work. Ideal for collectors of Napoleonic art or lovers of period bronzes, this sculpture is also a refined
