VEVEY (Switzerland), Second half of the 17th century

In very good condition, early period and of good quality of material and finish; a small local crack is however reported on the goblet.

This pitcher has probably never been scrubbed and has a beautiful dark satin patina. Its large size gives it a great decorative presence.

The "Arquebuse Exercise" was a shooting society in Geneva. It is one of the oldest shooting societies in the city, attested since 1474. At that time, the "exercises" brought together what we would call today militiamen who trained in the defense of the city.
