Description

Drawing of horsemen with ruins and a city in the background.

Technique: Ink on paper applied to canvas

Period: Late 18th - 19th century

Dimensions: H 48 cm x W 37 cm

Condition: Yellowed paper, with losses; needs restoration

Mounting: Side hooks, likely part of a boiserie

Style: Pre-Romantic

This ink drawing depicts three horsemen in the foreground, one of whom is wearing armor, as they point toward a distant city with towers and spires, situated on the edge of a river or lake.

To the left, a rocky wall with ruins and a leaning tree introduces a suggestive and nostalgic atmosphere.

Although the figures wear 17th-century attire, the piece dates from the late 18th to 19th century.

The paper, yellowed with time, shows a watermark structure visible from the sides.

Side hooks suggest it was likely part of a boiserie.

The pre-Romantic style is evident in the melancholic depiction of nature and ruined architecture.
