University of the Arts from 1951 to 1957. After completing his studies, he joined the furniture industry, and from 1956 to 1969 headed the Furniture Design Studio within the Union of the Furniture Industry in Poznan. At the same time, he was artistic director of Poznan's "Sculpture and Carpentry Crafts" cooperative.

In 1960, he founded the "Kolo" group with three other designers, Czeslaw Kowalski, Leonard Koutchma and Janusz Rózanski. This group initiated the Poznan Furniture Biennial and, in 1978, led to the creation of the Organizing Committee for the first Poznan International Furniture Triennial.

In 1965, he became a professor at the Poznan Fine Arts School. He also worked at the Helsinki Institute of Industrial Arts and spent time in the UK. This trip to the West gave him the idea of founding the Industrial Design Department at the Poznan Academy of Fine Arts in 1971.

He died in 2008.
