Description

*From the middle of the 17th century, the pendulum appeared in France replacing the foliot mechanisms of clocks. The religious clock is one of the flagship models of the reign of the Sun King. The Louis XIV religious clock: the case of the religious clock, often rectangular, is surmounted by a pediment or an ogee and fire pots. It is framed by pilasters or columns. Its case can be in Boule marquetry or in veneer wood and enhanced with gilded and chiseled bronzes. The dial, in brass or gilded bronze, occupies an important place on the facade. ATTENTION:
