Paris, and particularly of Montmartre, which would make him successful. He gained access to the very famous Cercle Volney and Parisian galleries such as the Roussard gallery. His paintings would be exhibited alongside those of Degas, Derain, Domergue, Buffet, Braque, Picasso, Foujita, Utrillo, Laurencin etc... until 1969, the year in which he stopped painting following complications caused by a traffic accident suffered a few years earlier (1963). His success would allow him to live comfortably until his death on March 13, 1999 at Martoulet in Saint-Germain-Les-Belles (87).
