Description

If Julien Mack's signature is today best known for its quenelle recipe, this historic company was born in the heart of Burgundy, the homeland of mustard, in the middle of the 19th century and that is why it is not surprising to find porcelain mustard pots signed by this house dating from the first half of the 20th century. A charming way to promote yourself far from current marketing methods. Here is a model among others created by this house in the shape of stacks of plates with the last one, the lid, presenting two pieces of sausage and a little mustard, of course. I do not know if the wooden ladle is original or brought back later.
