Description

This pair of bronze flower pots, dating from the late 19th century, perfectly embodies the Japanese aesthetic that captivated European artists and artisans at the time. Crafted with meticulous care, these pots feature delicate nature-inspired motifs, characterized by stylized flowers and slender leaves, evoking Japanese decorative arts. Their gilded bronze finishes add a touch of luxury and elegance, while the sinuous, organic lines are a testament to the accomplished craftsmanship of French artisans. Each pot is designed to hold plants, bringing a touch of serenity and refinement to any space. Due to their distinctive style and provenance, these flower pots are not only practical objects, but also works of art that reflect the influence of Asian culture on Western design in the late 19th century.
