Beaux-Arts under the direction of Antonin Mercié and Jean Boucher. Chiparus is mainly known for his sculptures representing exotic dancers mounted on onyx or portor marble bases. Exhibiting at the Salon in 1914, Chiparus received an honorable medal there. He opened his studio after the war and exhibited regularly in salons. Most of his works were produced between 1914 and 1933. In the 1920s, Demetre Chiparus was inspired by the excavations carried out in Egypt, including the discovery of Tutankhamun's tomb, to create sculptures. His work is also inspired by Russian ballets and French theater.
