Description

Humidor, richly decorated with artistic wood carvings made in the Art Deco style.

Technological progress in the 1930s also affected the shape of the box. A similar fashion, vertically profiled decoration with smoothed corners was carried by the flagships of technical progress of those years; such as cars, cameras, radios, etc.

Design invaded the conservative world of aristocratic habits. Thus emphasizing the technical side and dignity of a luxurious item for the elite.

Humidor is a box for storing cigars. The main task of a humidor is to maintain a humidity level of 68-72%, at which cigars can be stored without loss of quality.
