Description

This early 20th century bronze sculpture with a brown patina is a work based on the work of the famous animal sculptor Pierre Jules Mène (1810-1879). Depicting two Arabian horses in a dynamic and realistic posture, this piece captures the elegance and grace of these majestic animals. The meticulous details of the horses' musculature and manes demonstrate Mène's technical mastery and his concern for realism. The brown patina adds depth and richness to the sculpture, accentuating the play of light and shadow on the horses' forms. This work is a remarkable example of early 20th century animal art. It highlights the beauty and nobility of Arabian horses, and reflects the interest of the time in the faithful representation of nature and animals. *****
