Description

Funny zoomorphic flowerpot representing a vulture. This ceramic is in flamed stoneware with green, blue and brown glaze on a beige background. This magnificent stoneware comes from the Jean Bordelais factory in the town of Palinges (department 71) and located in the place called "le Montet". This factory was active from 1927 to 1976. In 1967 Jean Bordelais died but his wife and daughter ensured his succession until the final closure in 1976. Our flowerpot does not have a signature but this was quite common and many pieces of elm were not signed. Shipping and protection costs 20 euros in metropolitan France, other destinations contact us.
