Description

These octagonal plates with pearled edges in fine cream-coloured earthenware from Montereau still exert a fascination on people who like the good tone of the 18th century from which these models come, although these ones were made later, more precisely at the beginning of the 19th century by the Montereau earthenware factory before it merged with that of Creil in 1840. One plate has a hair and they all have a small chip but we forgive them, it is part of their power of fascination...
