Description

Precious Dutch secretaire desk chest from the late 1700s and early 1800s, Louis XVI style, made of fine mahogany wood and mahogany feather, represents an example of refined furniture art in Louis XVI style. This secretaire stands out for its rich inlays that adorn every surface. The bronze applications, the drawer in the upper part and the folding door with internal inlays, drawers and leather top, give this piece a touch of elegance and style. The lower body is made up of two closed doors, offering extra storage space.
