New Caledonia, Kanak culture
19th century

Wood, plant fiber
Height 70 cm

This Kanak wooden club is a typical example of the weapons and symbolic objects used by the indigenous peoples of New Caledonia. It is distinguished by its sculpted mushroom-shaped head, a characteristic motif of Kanak clubs, which served both martial and ritual purposes.

The piece is made of polished wood, displaying a beautiful patina, indicative of its age and use. The lower part is wrapped in plant fibers, reinforcing
