decorations typical of the Maria Theresa of Austria period, and under the upper cornice, in a flowery band that envelops the entire piece of furniture. In the lower part of the piece of furniture, the same band contains woodland decorations, partially deteriorated.

The central part is the most interesting and unusual: on the left door a hunter embraces a rifle, while on the right door a male deer is portrayed. On the notches, two garlands enclose young roosters, a symbol of courage, ardour and victory.

Inside, the original division of the spaces is still present, and the date of construction is shown on the right door.

Of particular value are the lock and all the hardware, original and functioning.
