Description

Belle Époque brooch-pendant in 18 carat gold and rose-cut diamonds, heart jewel, early 20th century Superb Belle Époque jewel, both brooch and pendant, representing a crescent moon adorned with a finely worked spray of flowers. Made of 18 carat gold, this jewel is enhanced with rose-cut diamonds, giving brilliance and elegance to the whole. The delicate and openwork structure perfectly illustrates the refined style of the early 20th century, where floral motifs and harmonious curves were favored. This jewel is part of the tradition of heart jewels, which symbolize sentimental and romantic messages. The crescent moon is a powerful symbol of femininity, renewal and mystery, while the spray of flowers evokes fertility, love and fulfillment. Combined, these motifs were frequently used in sentimental jewelry to express deep feelings, promises of love or wishes for protection. This type of jewelry was often offered as a token of affection, thus reinforcing its emotional and symbolic value. Thanks to its ingenious fastening system, this jewel can be worn as a brooch or a pendant. The removable bail hides the pendant attachment for discreet wear as a brooch, offering two styles in a single piece of jewelry.
