Description

ABOUT THE ARTWORK

Mitjili mainly paints the Dream of a tree, the Watiya Tjuta, a species used to make spears and boomerangs. This endemic species grows in Ulwalki which is located in the Gibson Desert, near Kintore.

This country is characterized by red sand dunes (sandhills), bushes and trees including the famous desert oaks. Mitjili's works are distinguished by a management of space focusing on the patterns of the leaves of these trees and by the way she treats the background of her paintings.

Unlike many Desert artists who use a classic pointillist background forming colored areas, Mitjili paints with large dots and flat tints, this gives Mitjili's works a surprisingly contemporary look.

ABOUT MITJILI NAPURRURLA (1945-2019)

Mitjili Napurrula was born in Papunya around 1945. Her family played an important role for the aboriginal community of Papunya. Half-sister of the famous artist Turkey Tjupurrula Tolson, she is the daughter of Tjunkiya Napaltjarri, an artist also known for her participation in the Minyama Tjukurrpa Project in the mid-1990s and through which she became one of the most respected female painters in Kintore. Married to the painter Long Tom Tjapanangka who won the 16th Telstra Art Award in 1999, she moved with him to Haasts Bluff (Ikuntji) located 230 km west of Alice Springs in the 1980s.

It was in the early 1990s that she began painting. She depicts the Tree Dreaming (Watiya Tjuta) which concerns a particular species of tree from which the men of her family make weapons, associated with her father's country (Uwalki). Mitjili is one of the artists who marked the early 2000s with the international dimension that her work took. She has participated in numerous exhibitions in Australia, Holland, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Italy, Singapore, and the United States. She particularly distinguished herself at the exhibition "Spirit Country: Contemporary Australian Aboriginal Art" held at the Fine Arts Museum in San Francisco in 1999, as well as at the prestigious Adelaide Biennial in 2000, "Beyond the Pale". Mitjili Napurrula died in 2019, she was a pioneer artist of contemporary Aboriginal painting and her works are today among the most collected Aboriginal works.
