Description

Winged table with turned legs. Walnut wood.
Spanish School, 18th century.

Round folding table with two wings that can be folded down and supported by two legs joined for each wing by lower uprights. When the table is folded, it has a drawer with a wooden knob on each side and two legs on each side, joined in a rectangle by a jamb. The legs and vertical elements of the furniture are transformed into balustrade elements and discs, as is customary in the Spanish school since the Baroque. -
