Description

This model created in the 80s that he called "Carlton" was imagined by the famous designer decorator Pierre-Yves Rochon in reference to the famous hotel of the same name. Branded MLE, these sober wall lights have a stepped frame with a refined and very typical Art Deco design, a style to which they pay wonderful homage. Original label present on each one. Made of chrome-plated metal, their original white opal glass tube diffuses a warm white light. These wall lights can be installed vertically or horizontally depending on your needs. Equipped at each end with a fluorescent tube, they work perfectly and are ready to be installed! Dimensions: Height / Length: 40 cm x 12 cm depth Weight: 2.150 kg each wall light or 4.300 kg for both (excluding packaging) They date from the time of creation and both the chrome and the glass diffuser tube are of quality - their weight is proof of this! The diffuser tube is made of thick glass, while the glasses of the currently manufactured wall lights are made of PVC. Good general condition. They have been used. Cleaning scratches, some irregularities chrome layer, traces of age (see photos) which the reduced price takes into account. Please note that I respond to any request on my objects.
