Description

Rare, 1950s commercial display counter, in oak, glass, leather and brass, stamped Siegel Paris. It is a true testament to the craftsmanship of the Siegel Paris house, founded at the end of the 19th century, which is an iconic name in the creation and manufacture of high-end commercial furniture, such as counters, display cases and displays. This display counter, formerly used in a haberdashery, is double-sided. It is composed as follows: In the upper part: a glass display case upholstered in beige leather, accessible by two sliding oak doors. In the lower part: two sliding oak doors open onto a spacious storage space, divided into two parts, each fitted with a removable shelf. This display counter has been carefully cleaned and the varnish on its oak structure has been polished with linseed oil. In
