Description

Rare, 1950s commercial display counter, in oak, glass and leather, stamped Siegel Paris. It is a true testament to the craftsmanship of the Siegel Paris house, founded at the end of the 19th century, which is an iconic name in the creation and manufacture of high-end commercial furniture, such as counters, display cases and displays. This display counter, formerly used in a haberdashery, is double-sided. It is composed as follows: The top is half in glass and the other half in anthracite gray leather. On the left side: a glass display case, upholstered in beige leather, with a height-adjustable glass shelf. It is accessible by two sliding oak doors. In the middle: three open wooden shelves. On the right side: three drawers, which slide perfectly, with original brass handles. The first locks and is divided into two parts. This
