Description

This ring is composed of five rings connected by a central bar, in gold each ring is set with turquoises and London blue topazes. This type of ring, called harem ring or Turkish ring, is originally from Turkey, from the Ottoman Empire, different legends circulate on the origin of these rings, the one that seems the prettiest to us tells us that the sultan offered his wives each year a new ring as a reward for their fidelity. It is hallmarked on a ring, unfortunately the hallmark is illegible. As is often the case for these rings, it is 14 carat gold. End of the 19th century or beginning of the 20th century Gold, turquoises and London blue topazes. Finger size 55.
