Pair of oil paintings on wooden panels, framed in a carved and gilded wooden frame. The paintings depict two still lifes with flowers, placed in bronze vases of the "kantharoi" type. The painting technique, particularly accurate in the definition of the flowers and details, is distinguished by great care and precision. The use of chiaroscuro is also notable, giving depth and realism to the scenes. These paintings of great class and elegance are capable of tastefully furnishing any environment. They are attributed to an anonymous painter of Neapolitan origin, from the early 19th century.
