Description

very beautiful vanity or memento mori, articulated dating from the middle of the nineteenth century brass and copper.

It is a rare vanity articulated in three parts: the mandible moves as well as the cap on his skull which folds completely to discover a cavity inside the skull, it is very surprising and the rivets of actuation of the mandible are almost invisible.

the skull is finely made, carved and chiseled, very realistic with a good scale in the proportions.

the skull and its mandible are made of copper and the cup is made of brass.

a small hole at the tip of the cap suggests that there was a small ornament.

it may be a Phrygian cap, a revolutionary hat or a communard cap! this skull takes on a symbolic, humorous, offbeat, or ironic sense !!! according
