Description

Large watercolor attributed to Willem Van Leen
* representing fruit including plums and grapes surrounded by roses and leaves of vines, all placed on a stone entablature following the antique decor of the background.

A great painter of flowers, the painter has put drops of water on the leaves and fruits which reinforces the freshness of the subject.

* Willem Van Leen (1753-1825) is a Dutch flower painter born in Dordrecht and died in Delftshaven. A pupil of Jan Arends, Dirk, Kuypers and Jorias Ponse, he went to Paris in 1793, returned there in 1808, and knew M. Sauvage there. The Boymans Museum in Rotterdam retains a work by him and is very present in major European and world collections. The watercolor itself measures 26.7 x 34.6 cm.
