In 1920, he received the prize from the Société des paysagistes, then in 1923, the Corot prize.

In 1929, he won the gold medal in the Engravings Section. With Maurice Achener, he actively collaborated in the publishing house of the Société de Saint-Eloy which published in the 1930s the series of "Little towns of France". He is the author of more than 500 etchings, a large collection of which is kept at the BNF's Prints Department. He illustrated a number of works. The Musée d'Orsay has his painting entitled The Pont des Saints-Pères. A street named after him in Bois-Colombes.
