Description

Art deco coffee game, between pinball and table football. These two bronze, chrome figurines represent hockey players. The players compete using a round handle to send the steel balls into the opponent's cages. The backgrounds of the game are serigraphed on pearly cream galalithe. Galalithe is a resin, made from The milk box. The manufacturing stopped at the beginning of the 2nd world war. This game of the years 20/30 is proposed in the bistros by Les Etablissements André Forestier in the Jura
