Exhibitions of Brussels (1897) and Paris (1900) but which was the center of a controversy over nudes at the 1905 Universal Exhibition in Liège where this work was covered with a veil. . He was considered as one of the apostles of realistic sculpture among the Belgian artists of the XIX ° with his creations resulting from his tormented genius. Great circus lover, Man of the people, Jef Lambeaux will never lose his childhood wonder at the spectacle of wrestlers, boxers and other bodybuilders who once exhibited in the squares. Sander Pierron reports: "In winter, you will meet Lambeaux every evening at the circus. In summer, in July and August, you will be sure to find him in the front row of spectators in the athletic arenas of the fair on the boulevard du Midday." This is where Lambeaux drew inspiration for his powerful sculpted groups that express the effort, pain and emotions of combat. Jef Lambeaux could not but be seduced by the muscular phenomenon Eugen Sandow. Another major work: The Human Passions (1886), a marble bas-relief that was integrated into the pavilion of Victor Horta in the Parc du Cinquantenaire, for which he received a medal of honor at the Universal Exhibition of 1900 in Paris. He was made a member of the Royal Belgian Academy in 1903. Since 1899, the relief of Human Passions has been the subject of praise and criticism. He was made an Officer of the Order of Leopold and of the Order of Bavaria.
