Description

The Louis XVI style gold pendant is composed with medallion representing ruins. At the foot of a column, a dog near a rifle waits for the return of his master. The patterns stand out against an amati gold background. The medallion is framed by a net of royal blue enamel decorated with roses whose heart is set with small pink cut diamonds. Palms of different shades of gold emphasize the composition. The pendant is set with small diamonds and quivered.

A system at the back of the medallion allows you to insert a lock of hair or a photograph.
