Italian work realized in the 1950's

Roberto MANGO (1920-2003) was a Italian architect and designer. He began to teach in the Univesity of Naples in 1958 and he founded the Napolitain design school which contributed to change the thinking on the industrial design in the 1960's-1970's. He collaborated with many architecture and designmagazine like Domus or Interiors of which he was co-redactor in New York.
