with decorative inlays of ebony, olive, colored wood, tortoiseshell and mother-of-pearl, and other more traditional ones using leaf veneers as our dresser. After his death his widow will keep her workshop in activity until the revolution. The discoveries of Herculaneum (1738) and Pompeii (1748) will launch the fashion for antique bronzes, the chest of drawers presented is a perfect example, on a Louis XV structure we find the handles with profiles in medallions, the entrances to ribbon bow and garland as well as the lamp base with a casserole pattern, characteristic of the Transition style.
