Description

Beautiful 18th century box in an eventful shape in Sceaux earthenware.

The lid decorated with two angels or puttos represented on a mound of nature raised in an entourage of foliage painted in blue.

The body embellished with floral garlands suspended from knots like trimmings, the base and the upper part of the body repeating the same foliage motifs as a reminder of the perimeter of the lid.

To report the presence of a crack on the body and also note that its lid has two breaks or cracks, without missing to report (please look at the photos please).

Despite these accidents, this box retains a great interest, it is a beautiful historical "document" of this great seal factory.
