Description

Very attractive portrait from the Louis XV period, representing a high-ranking military officer of the old regime, supposedly "Colonel of the brigade", wearing his decoration of Knight of the military and royal order of Saint-Louis, and the number 47 on the buttons of his uniform.

This handsome man, represented from the front with his head turned to his left in military uniform, with a powdered hairstyle with a single hammer on the horizontal side, revealing the black ribbon of his rosette at the back, exteriorizes the expression of the benevolent force and values.

the eye is sparkling, the smile authentic and good. Bright paint of very good quality in shimmering colors.
